Peak Oil: Production forecasts and implications

As news of oil prices continue to dominate business headlines around the world, CEDA is privileged to welcome a leading oil analyst, Chris Skrebowski, to deliver a series of lunchtime presentations hosted by CEDA in Adelaide, Perth, Melbourne and Sydney. Chris will present on the future outlook for oil production and will present analysis from his 'Megaprojects Review', an annual documentation of world oil discovery, reserve growth and depletion.

Peak Oil is when global oil production starts its inevitable decline; when production from new fields can no longer offset declining production from the world's ageing giant oilfields, like the North Sea. Chris' Megaprojects analysis suggests it is virtually impossible to delay Peak Oil beyond 2010 while there is a range of technical and geopolitical pressures which may bring the date forward.

Tuesday, 29 August 2006
12.00pm for 12.15pm to 2.00pm
Swissotel Sydney, 68 Market Street, Sydney

Chris Skrebowski Editor Petroleum Review, Energy Institute

Chris has spent his entire working career in the oil industry split roughly two-thirds as an oil journalist and one-third as a planner/market analyst within the industry.

He became editor of Petroleum Review in June 1997 having edited Petroleum Economist for the previous three years. Prior to that, he spent eight years working for the Saudis, as an oil market analyst in London. Chris started his working career in 1970 as a long-term planner for BP and then joined Petroleum Times as a journalist just before the first oil crisis of 1973/74. In the late 1970s he edited Offshore Services, an offshore oil magazine.

As one of the founder members of the ASPO (Association for the Study of Peak Oil) group, he has a great interest in oil depletion and its consequences. He is also a trustee on the board of ODAC (Oil Depletion Analysis Centre). He has recently returned presenting a keynote address to the Fifth ASPO Peak Oil conference in Italy (see www.PeakOil.net)

Chris has made a number of presentations on oil depletion over the last three years in Paris, London, Copenhagen, Edinburgh, Dublin, Lisbon, Cologne, Denver and Geneva. In company with Dr Colin Campbell, founder of ASPO, he has made presentations to the UK and Irish governments.
